MISS LENEVE NOT GUILTY SAYS JURY

TYPIST DID NOT KNOW OF MURDER

SHE PLEADED NOT GUILTY

Introduces No New Evidence. Not Put in Witness Box

Loudon, Oct. 25 .- After a trial lasting only a few hours in the new Bailey criminal court today a jury found her husband, Dr. Crippen will die on the gallows on November 8.

his flight to Canada and with him their grandsons are supporting Robert was arrested and indicted.

From the first she has maintained behavior subsequent to the disappearance of Mrs. Crippen, or Belle Elmore as she was known on the stage, was such as to betray a guilty knowledge of the murder.

Pleaded Not Guilty.

When arraigned today, Miss Leneve pleaded not guilty, the witnesses were introduced by the prosecution to show that she had experienced periods of great mental distress following Belle Elmore's death. The crown prosecutor, Richard Muir, introduced only such evidence as has been brought out in the earlier hearings.

Miss Leneve's counsel, Frederick E. Smith, M. P., asked the jury to bear in mind that his client had been under years since she was sixteen years of age. This he asserted, accounted for her flight in the doctor's company. There was no proof that she had knowledge of the crime. Counsel said that he took upon his own shoulders the responsibility for not putting Miss Leneve in the witness

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, who presided, in summing up for the jury said that he saw no reason why Dr. Crippen should have told Miss Leneve a story different from that which he told to others.

CALIFORNIAN FIRST WAR SPY

start for the Pacific slope the tocsin of war startled the land, and in common is believed that ultimatelay Tennessee with the loyal citizens of the north he decided to abandon his private business enterprises and serve the imperfled country.

It was in April of that year that Baker visited Washington city for the purpose of allying himself with the government in the defense of his country. There he had an interview with General Scott, who was then in command of the army of the United States. Present at the interview was Hon. George W. Wright of California, and at that time the plans were discussed and laid for a visit to be made by Baker to Richmond, which was the capital of the Confederacy. In pursuance of this plan the start was made for Richmond ous journey being to learn, if possible, troops and of their fortifictaions. There being traitors in the government and in the army, the Union troops were not let into the secret of the expedition or its mission. Therefore Baker's first step from Washington in the direction of the "sacred soil of Virginia" was one of great risk, as any attempt to pass the lines might cause his arrest. Twice at least he was apprehended and returned to Washington, but after many tribulations he succeeded in evading the outposts and hired a negro boy to row him across the river. Here he was promptly placed under arrest by the confederate sentinels. By them ho was discredited and looked upon as a spy, when he assured them that he was a peaceful citizen, unarmed and on his way to Richmond.

Four days after his arrival in Rich mond Baker was ushered into the pres ence of President Jefferson Davis, the audience being in the front parlor of the Spottswood house. The weather being warm, the confederate chieftain wore simply a light linen coat, without vest, cravat or collar. Davis listened with indifference to the story told by Baker, and at the conclusion of the narrative gave no intimation as to his probable action. After a lapse of three days the suspected spy was for the third time taken into the presence of Davis. Impersonating Sam. a son of Judge Munson of Knoxville, who went to California at an early day, Baker succeeded in deceiving the president, from whom he received a parole that released him from confinement and pledged himself not to leave Rich Captain. mond without first having received per mission from the provost marshal. Richmond thus became an open book to Baker, who soon obtained all the information he desired relative to the movements, plans, fortifications and strength of the enemy. Being anxious to return to the north without delay, he secured a pass that carried him to below that city he crossed the Rappacompelled to kill one and wound two of the confederate sentinels who were guarding the river bank.

This, then, is the story of the beginning of the secret service department of the government, although it was not until August,, 1861, that Baker became regularly attached to the war department as secret agent.

The ore is of a low grade, though higher than the Joplin, Missouri, ore, and Mr. Osgood believes that the key to the situation is simply the working of the deposits on a large enough scale to permit of the use of labor saving machinery so as to reduce the per ton cost of mining and milling the ore, and he gives the figures upon which his conclusions are based. He also gives figures to show that the smelting of Tennessee ores in Tennessee should prove a very profitable business when properly carried on.

COMET'S VOTING CONTEST 'HITS' DEMOCRATS

WHO JOINED REPUBLICANS

Rob the Grave in Their Mad Desire to Hold an Office

Columbia, Tenn., Oct. 25. - In a peech which aroused a large crowd of democrats to the greatest enthusiasm, Judge Joseph E. Jones, of Dresden, last afternoon delivered a blow to the democrats who have joined with the republicans in a deal to make Ben W. Hooper governor. Judge Jones called attention to the fact that the last time he spoke in Columbia he was introduced by Ed Carmack, and he said of all the men he ever knew, Ed Carmack had more contempt and hate for republicans. He said that "Carmack alive was so much loved by the republicans that they kept him away from the white house, where Napier, the negro, was welcomed." He denounced the 'political vultures" who would rob the grave in their mad desire to hold office, and said Carmack in all his life never voted for a republican, even for constable. Judge Jones said Hooper, who was merely a tool for the designing Sanders and the carpet-baggers, was a dangerous man to be given the power of governor. He cautioned the Confederates to beware of him, because if he should be governor he would name the text-book board, and the children of the schools might have to study books which made a hero of every northern soldier and a traitor of every man who followed Robert E. Lee. He denounced Hooper's slander on the Confederate
